Arts survives debate

by SANDY GAGE

A new annal in the saga of the sea was written last night as Dr. Brian Robinson of the Arts Faculty fought off three colleagues and numerous students to gain the Professors' Raft before a capacity crowd of cheering, heckling students.

A merciless show of hands sent Dr. J.J. Jonas of the Faculty of Engineering, Professor A.R. Marshall of the School of Commerce and Donald Kingsbury of the Faculty of Science into the sea, and then offered Robinson survival.

Dr. Jonas led off for the supplants with a speech lauding the Engineering Faculty. Peter Jones, one of last year's Engineering Princesses led a cheering section in support of Jonas throughout the latter's oration.

"Engineers built the raft", Jonas concluded, and then brought out for display his survival kit.

Appealing to the emotions of his audience Professor Marshall envisioned his loved ones left to the whims of a "mad scientist", or an artsman "who would lure them into the tall grass" or the "honesty and integrity of a commerceman".

Audience participation increased when Donald Kingsbury requested pay for his forensic effort. The response was a barrage of pennies and nickles followed closely by toilet paper and spitballs. Kingsbury's subtle remonstrance of "shut up" proved ineffective and he was forced to draw out his speech until the crowd settled down.

Robinson charmed the students with music from his jazz clarinet and demonstrated artsman agility by standing on his head on the rostrum table. To complete his attack he expounded on the theme "universal and brotherly love" as taught in the arts faculty.

Oxford talks politics in annual debate tonight

The annual Oxford-McGill Debate will take place tonight at 8:30 pm in Redpath Hall.

Topic for the debate, sponsored by the Debating Union, will be "Resolved that Politics is far too Serious a Matter for Intellectuals."

The affirmative will be upheld by the Oxford team of Michael Beloff and Jonathon P. Aitken. Stan Hartt and Lionel Chetwynd will present the negative viewpoint for McGill.

McGill speaker, Lionel Chetwynd B.C.L.1 was Chairman of the Public Speaking Committee of the Debating Union. He received his education at Columbia University where he won the "First Speaker's Award", and at Sir George Williams University.

There he served as President of the Arts Faculty, was Speaker of the Debating Society and the Valedictorian of the Graduating Class. The Gazette awarded him the Gold Medal for Public Speaking. He came to McGill with the Chief Justice R.K. Greenshields Memorial Scholarship.

MICHAEL BELOFF

Beloff was born in 1942, and educated at Eton College and Magdalen College, Oxford. He has participated in County Chess, as well as college tennis and athletics, and is a member of the editorial board of Isis, and the Labour Party. He was President of the Oxford Union.

Aitken, the same age as his partner, was educated at Eton College and Christ Church. He was Vice-President of the Oxford Union Society, President of the Oxford Conservative Association and Editor of the Oxford Tory. He has played college cricket and football as well as participating in international bobsledding.

Both men intend to become barristers. Aitken also plans to enter journalism and politics.

JOHN AITKEN

Stan Hartt received his B.A. in Honours Economics at McGill in 1959 and studied for his Master's Degree at the University of Paris in 1960. He received his B.C.L. at McGill in 1963 and his Doctorate of Law at the University of Paris.

He was awarded the Greenshields Memorial Scholarship and the Macdonald Travelling Scholarship in law as well as the Guy Drummond Travelling Scholarship in Economics. He has taught at the Labour College of Canada, Sir George Williams University, and McGill.

BIG RED ROLLS KINGSTON-WAY

Details of the projected Big Red Train to Kingston have been released in their definitive form after last-minute consultation between the SEC, the Board of Transport Commissioners, and the Daily's News Department.

The rolling stock will pull out of CNR Central Station (formerly known as Tunnel Station from its location) at 8:30 am Daylight Saving Time. Following a scenic trip through some of the most attractive quarters of Montreal and along the Upper St. Lawrence it will reach Kingston more or less at 11:50 am. The return trip from Kingston will leave at 7 pm Daylight Time, arriving in Central Station at 10:30 pm.

The cost for all this, including a ticket to the game, is no more than $10.50. Conceivably it could be less, as $2 will be refunded if no damage is caused to the equipment, other than normal depreciation. The stadium ticket alone costs $1.50.

Fans are reminded that, due to the flexible capacity of this form of transportation, an unlimited number (without reason) can be accommodated. Residents of the Town of Mount Royal will confirm the validity of this generalization. As the Golden Gaels traditoinally constitute the most serious obstacle between our Redmen and the coveted hardware, it may be assumed that the demand for tickets will be as effectively unlimited as the supply.

So stock up on red and white sweaters, toilet paper, and whatever else the stadium police will tolerate. Savour the forgotten pleasures of intercity train travel and support the Big Red Team as they head for the second victory of the Season. In keeping with its reputation as a family newspaper, the Daily is pleased to announce that "Section D" is not a sleeping car accommodation, but an area of the Kingston stadium.

Symphony Tickets

Thursday, October 15 is the last day for the students wishing to get tickets to the Students' Symphony Series at the Place des Arts. Tickets are still available and may be picked up at the Students' Executive Office in the Union or on the table in the Arts Building. Additional forms may be gotten from Douglas Leopold, HU, 8-4040. Tickets will be distributed Monday in the mail.

Lectures Cancelled

All lectures and laboratory periods will be cancelled on Monday, October 12, Thanksgiving Day.

Tombstone at the Crossroads

Automation of the learning process goes on apace. Its latest manifestation is the tape-recorded lecture. This system, which apparently has been in use at the Sorbonne for some years, is now becoming popular in North America and we may expect it at McGill in the near future. Essentially the idea is that when you have missed, either by good luck or by deliberate omission, the nine o'clock collected thoughts of Professor Tombstone, you may submit a small fee to the university and, by return of post, you can have taped Tombstone right in your very livingroom.

On the surface, this development appears trivial. It seems to us, however, that the implications are endless. Consider, for example, the effect of such a measure on the content of the average lecture: live Tombstone under studio conditions is surely going to be different. No longer may he expect to pass muster with that peculiar mélange of hums and haws, comatose whimsy, sneezes and non-sequiturs, rhetorical meanderings and banal musings that in the past he was pleased to consider as The Lecture; nor will he be allowed to indulge his favourite pastime of whiling away the hour in an esoteric exchange with that dreadful girl in the front row who has already read the textbook fourteen times — and knows it — while the rest of us build up hate and turn — this is the measure of our despair — to the Daily. No, from here on in Tombstone is for posterity, caught, as it were, in the act, his pathetic mumblings, his desperate attempts at gaiety, his terrifying lack of rapport, all held in a frozen moment of truth, by the chilling winds of technology.

Later, in the cold evenings, at the winter solstice, at Christmas time, to the echoing nutcracker around the family hearth, when the children have become bored with Monopoly, Tombstone will be dusted off, his middle pierced by the ubiquitous Grundig, and to sounds of raucous laughter and brandy hiccups, he will regale suburbia with a totally misleading account of the Tudor Constitution. The ultimate in entertainment has been reached. The flesh becomes Word. Tombstone, at last, is Living Presence.

It would be a mistake to presuppose that those who wish to avail themselves of postal education will remain in a minority. There is no particular reason why ten thousand students should not save the busfare and invest in tape. Thus, in one fell swoop, will be solved the teacher shortage, the building shortage, and the traffic problem.

Nor will it be necessary to ask an embarrassed professor to tape a lecture in front of seven hundred empty seats. Certainly not. Tombstone may deliver his lecture in his apartment, beholding the bright countenance of truth down among the bacon rinds and the marmalade, and send it off to a clearing house for dispatch. This will solve the further problem of academic qualifications. Obviously since the entire operation is carried on in private, no-one will know that the lecture is being read straight from the textbook.

It may, of course, be necessary to hire an advertising agency to market the product. This should present no difficulty. The tape can be given a dry run, preferably somewhere in Northern Ontario, random samples may be taken and the whole thing attractively packaged for the home market. Later, an anthology may be issued under the title, "The Best of Tombstone", or, "Tombstone — The Vintage Years", with erudite notes on the sleeve and printed inserts for the aficionado; later again, subdued academic-type applause may be dubbed and released under the heading "Tombstone At The Hungry I". And a monaural version will be readily available for those who require Student Aid.

There is, we feel, great merit in the new approach. Private enterprise, in the shape of admen, recording companies and public relations officers, will receive a much-needed shot in the arm; the free play of market forces will guarantee, as always, the improved quality of the product; lecturer and student need no longer meet; the entire community, educators and educated, for the future may remain in their concrete boxes, thus ensuring the triumph of that encapsulated alienation deemed correct for a property-owning democracy; and, finally, a method of distribution will have been found that will cut out the middle man. On this last point, we have to admit there are difficulties. For the middleman, in this case, is McGill University.

YCL Suspects Queen's Motives

Dear Madam,

The University of British Columbia's Ubysey has seen fit to take a principled stand on the Queen's visit. Why has the McGill Daily, which is so much closer to the issue, not managed to take any stand at all? Ubysey criticised the visit as being inopportune, unnecessary, and undesirable. The Daily editorial bumbled on about "arboreal glory" and the Congo.

We realise that the whole issue of monarchy is absurd in this century, and that the idea of the Prime Minister of Canada going to all the trouble of arranging a state visit for the head a nineteenth century royal family is nothing short of laughable. Nevertheless the whole farce seems to have managed to take up the front pages and editorial columns of most Canadian newspapers, and to have received large amounts of attention from a large number of people.

Perhaps it is understandable that it should. After all it is rather an accomplishment to be the subjects of a hereditary monarch of a foreign country when one is supposed to have been independent and ruled by an elected government for a hundred years.

It may be very nice for Miss Elizabeth Windsor, or Mrs. Phillip Mountbatten, or whatever her name should be, to see the "autumnal splendour of the Laurentians" every seven years, but why the Canadian taxpayers' money — or the British taxpayers' — should be spent on showing them to her is a matter of some doubt, especially considering how many citizens of Montreal don't even get to see the Apalachians that often.

Actually we suspect there are more sinister reasons, such as British business men wanting to cement commonwealth ties in order to sell more tractors, or Lesage and Pearson getting together to import British capital — and British control — of Quebec industry.

Whatever the reason is, we find it no excuse for insulting Quebec and French Canada with the importation of a foreign monarch. What kind of a "free and equal partner" is it that has the monarch of the old colonial power foisted upon its capital city? How can it do anything but make the fine sentiments of our politicians at Ottawa seem even more hollow and hypocritical than they do already?

Actually the whole concept of a hereditary monarchy bears connotations which most of us would find appalling. If birth qualifies one to be head of state, why not to be a member of parliament? We deny her the exercise of power, but the symbol remains. If a royal family, why not a royal race? Why not apartheid? Why not colonialism? Why not convince French Canadians they will always be inferior? Why not genocide?

Let the British business men find another gimmick to sell their goods. We don't need somebody else's Queen just when the French Canadian nation is striving for emancipation. We have nothing against her personally, we just don't need a humiliating symbol of subservience. McGill students might be well advised to join the French Canadian students who will be demonstrating against her visit outside the Place Ville Marie on Friday afternoon.

McGill Young Communist League

Reader Questions YCL's Roots

Dear Madam,

Why is it impossible to find out the YCL's platform from their journals? Are they afraid some club will take them up on their offer and debate their ideas? Or are they afraid to put anything in print?

Roots is devoted entirely to tearing down democracy. In their first paper this year, and the ones I read last year, they did not have one article on Communism. However, there was an article by "B. Russell" on hatred towards the U.S. in South V.N., giving particulars on disembowelments, burnings alive (4,000), etc. This little gem does not say who did these things. This does not give too good an idea of the YCL's program.

The sheet "SO" was devoted to political parties. It laughed at the Liberals, NDP, and the Conservatives. For the YCL it shows that they dislike Woody Woodpecker (probably consider him fascist), and know about the rice production of Uttar Pradesh. Not a word about the aims of the club.

If they must comment on other countries, why not mention the Hungarian Revolution: tell why only Communist party (Continued on page 3)

BETSY BRUGLER

PENSKECH

Betsy is a transfer student from Columbia University and is presently in fourth year Science. Her activities at McGill so far have included Public Relations Director of McGill Choral Society, Panhellenic Debating Chairman, Co-chairman of Publicity for Shoe-shine Day, and Scholarship Chairman of her Fraternity. In addition, Betsy has had experience in positions at Columbia which will enable her to add new and diversified ideas to the Women's Union.

THE COMMITTEE FOR THE CANDIDATE

RUTH THOMPSON

PENSKECH

We believe that Ruth is highly qualified for the above position on the basis of her contributions to numerous activities at McGill and in high school.

Last year Ruth was a member of the Intercollegiate basketball and swim teams. This year she is president of the Basketball Club, organizing intramural basketball, a member of the Competitive Sports Council, plays intramural tennis and assisted at the Freshette Reception and Activities Night.

THE COMMITTEE FOR THE CANDIDATE

W.A.A. President

JOAN GLASHAN

PLATFORM

In asking for your support in the election for President of the W.A.A., I propose to increase publicity of all athletic events; encourage increased participation in athletics whether they be recreational or competitive; make women students at McGill aware of our many facilities.

PENSKECH

Joan Glashan, a third year dental student, has represented McGill on six intercollegiate teams: hockey 60-64 and soccer 62-64. She has also taken part actively in figure skating, squash and riflery.

She was President of the hockey club, captain and manager of the hockey team and sports representative for medicine and dentistry. At present she is secretary and vice-president of the W.A.A.

Joan has been secretary-treasurer of her class, vice-president of the Women's Medical Undergraduate Society and is a member of the Redwing Society.

We feel that Joan's experience and enthusiasm make her an excellent candidate for President of the W.A.A.

THE COMMITTEE FOR THE CANDIDATE

BECKIE ROE

PLATFORM

I believe that the W.A.A. is operating well and will strive to maintain present policies and place special emphasis on:

Fostering a greater spirit on teams in intercollegiate sports; insuring that full use is made of the improvements established this year for publicizing the W.A.A.; encouraging greater efficiency and thoroughness in the operation of intramural activities which are represented on the W.A.A.

PENSKECH

Beckie Roe, B.Sc.4, has held the following positions: RVC Residence Athletics Council; President of Basketball Club; member of the Competitive Sports Council; Chairman, Competitive Sports Council and on W.A.A. executive.

CUS Committee welcomes recruits

The new members of the CUS committee consisting mainly of students who were recruited on Activities Night, met for the first time yesterday.

Chairman Ken Cabatoff outlined the scope of the society's concerns in international, national, and local affairs.

He discussed briefly the CUS boycott of South African exports, the influence of CUS in federal government, and the publication of the Canadian University magazine "Campus Canada."

The Chairman also presented the goals of CUS for the coming year. He explained that student participation in external and internal affairs is of growing importance and that CUS is determined to bring about this awareness on Campus.

He defined the role new members would play to bring about the attainment of these goals. In conclusion he expressed the hope that participation in CUS would prove profitable to the new recruits.

Jews a factor in U.S. elections says Horowitz

by SUE MACPHAIL

"The Jewish vote", Professor Gad Horowitz announced yesterday at Hillel "will be a definite factor in the 1964 American elections because of the ethnic background of Goldwater."

The fact that the Jewish vote is a reality, he observed, does not indicate that there is any sort of pressure on the Jewish voter but shows that this ethnic background has influenced his ideas and values. The Jewish immigrant is likely to have a socialist background.

There are several prejudice factors working in the coming election. Many voters will find it difficult to identify themselves with Goldwater because of his Jewish background. The Republican Party may also lose votes because of the fact that Miller is a Roman Catholic, as John F. Kennedy did in the last elections.

No catastrophe

The nature of the Republican Party, the two Party system and the office of Presidency would prevent Goldwater from introducing any radical policies. Goldwater will have to satisfy all elements of the Republican Party if he is to be elected, for generally both right and left wing advocates lean towards the center in order to satisfy the uncommitted vote.

In view of the fact that the Presidency is greater than the President himself, Goldwater will be powerless to go against the grain of the status quo. If he intends to repeal laws rather than pass them he will become a do-nothing President. "In that case", Professor Horowitz pointed out, "we can take him as well as we took Eisenhower."

Blues' QB top scorer

Quarterback Bryce Taylor of the University of Toronto Blues has taken an early lead in the Senior Intercollegiate Football League scoring race after one game.

Taylor, a 20-year-old medical student in his third season with the Blues, ran eight yards for one touchdown and kicked a convert as Varsity dropped a 20-13 decision to McGill Redmen last weekend. His seven points give him a one point edge over six players who have each counted one T.D.

Fullback Gary Cranmer of University of Western Ontario Mustangs leads in rushing with 82 yards gained on 21 carries and quarterback Glen St. John of McGill leads the league passers with 151 yards on 11 completions.

Toronto halfbacks Mike Eben top the pass receivers with five receptions apiece while Western's Garry Smith tops the punters in the league with a 39.2 average on 11 punts.

Fencing club presents show this evening

This evening at 7 pm in the John Turner Bone Room of the Gym, the Fencing Club will present an exhibition to introduce the sport to those unfamiliar with it. Everyone is welcome to attend this demonstration even though they may have no intention of joining the club.

Modern fencing employs three types of swords; the foil, the epee or dueling sword, and the sabre. Each weapon will be described as to its origin, its peculiarities, and its manner of use. Coach George Tully and assistants will then demonstrate how each weapon is used most efficiently.

All in all, it promises to be an interesting and informative evening for those who turn up.

PGSS men

This year the P.G.S.S. hopes to be able to form teams to compete in Intramural Sports. Any male Post Grads who could be interested in playing Touch Football, Basketball, Volleyball, or Hockey are asked to contact the P.G.S.S. Athletic Chairman Ostap Hawaeshka at RA. 8-7943 any time in the evening.

Badminton

The W.A.A. Badminton team gets off to a flying start tonight at from 7:00-10:00 p.m. in Currie Gym. Regular sessions will be held thereafter on Tuesday nights from 6:00-7:00 p.m.

The club is extremely fortunate in having Stan Cutts as coach. Cutts, a former world champion in badminton and one of the top teachers around, should be an excellent stimulus as the team is looking toward its best season yet.

PGSS women

Any Post Grad women who are interested in play-Chairman Ostap Hawaeshka or Bowling on a P.G.S.S. team are asked to contact Sherrill Owens at RE. 7-2350. The deadline for registration is Thursday October 8th. Therefore don't just read this, register NOW.

REDMEN SHOW WELL IN WATERPOLO LOSS

by BUNK ROBERTSON

The hard-fighting McGill Redmen bowed again to the rival East End Boys' Club in a 10-4 splash last night at the War Memorial Pool.

The star of the night for the Redmen was Marcel Lachance who played an excellent two way game and seemed tireless in the last half. McGill scorers were Glezos, Elliott, and newcomer Andy Heap who was credited with two counters. Scorers for East End included Juano and the ever-powerful Goldberg.

A post-game analysis by both coaches blamed the delay by McGill forwards in breaking away as a major fault of the Redmen. However, it must be realized that the East End club has been playing and practicing all summer while the Redmen have begun in the past few weeks. It is general club could be the best in Canada. However, Redmen coach Shiller rally agreed that the East End wants his team to practice against the best competition possible before the season begins.

The Redmen played a much stronger game this week after a week of practice and conditioning and should repeat their championship performance of last year. Veterans Sonny Belenkie and John Warren were sidelined with colds but are expected to be back in action soon. The team will continue next week with their rigorous schedule of three practices and a game each week.

Another factor which contributed to last night's defeat was McGill's inability to combine a number of short passes, and they depended on the long bomb all night. This was opposed to the East Enders whose passing was pin-point and successful.
